SUMMARY OVERVIEW

Leading relative player pay and strong collective protections

- The Hundred Women benefits from strong PCA player representation and collectively negotiated agreements, with high standards across payment reliability, security, dispute resolution and player rights.
- Commercial investment has doubled the women's team salary pot to £880,000 for 2026, while the minimum player salary rose 50% to £15,000, supporting strong relative player-pay ratings.
- Despite this progress, unilateral termination provisions in contracts (1/5) and commercial rights arrangements (2/5) remain weaknesses against international best practice. As private investment reshapes the league, player protections must keep pace with commercial growth.

CURRENT STRENGTHS

- Reliable player payments and independent security review
- Organising rights, collective bargaining and disputes
- Women's salary pool doubled; minimum salary increased to £15,000
- High player / agent approval rating: 4.5 / 5

GAPS / CONCERNS

- One-sided termination / extension rights
- Broad commercial rights signed over through player agreements, with limited reciprocal protections
